(1993); Jumeaux, jumelles dans l'Antiquité grecque et romaine (2005); and, with H. King, La médecine dans l'Antiquité grecque et romaine (2008). She has edited and contributed to Naître en 2001. Regards croisés sur la naissance et la petite enfance (2002); Naissance et petite enfance dans l'Antiquité (2004); L'embryon humain à travers l'histoire. Images, savoirs et rites (2007); with J. Wilgoux, Langages et métaphores du corps (2008); with V. Boudon and B. Maire, Femmes en médecine (2008); and, with T. Späth, Children, Memory, and Family Identity in Roman Culture (2010).

Jens-Arne Dickmann is Senior Lecturer in the Institute of Classical Archeology at Heidelberg University. On behalf of the Deutsches Archäologisches Institut at Rome he is director of the investigations in the Casa dei Postumii at Pompeii. He has published Domus frequentata. Anspruchsvolles Wohnen im pompejanischen Stadthaus (1999); Pompeji. Archäologie und Geschichte ((2005); translated into Italian (2007)) and a series of articles on Pompeian issues.

Suzanne Dixon is a feminist historian and is currently an Honorary Research Consultant in the School of History, Philosophy, Religion and Classics at the University of Queensland. Her interests include work and patronage in classical antiquity, as well as issues of law, gender and kinship. She is the author of The Roman Mother (1988); The Roman Family (1992); Reading Roman Women (2001); and Cornelia, Mother of the Gracchi (2007); and has edited or co-edited and contributed to the collections Pre-Industrial Women (1984); Stereotypes of Women in Power (1992); and Childhood, Class and Kin in the Roman World (2001).

Fanny Dolansky is Assistant Professor of Classics at Brock University in St. Catharines, Ontario, where she teaches Roman history, Latin language and literature, and Roman religion. She has published articles on the toga virilis ceremony and the Parentalia festival, and is currently working on a monograph on Roman domestic religion.

Stephen L. Dyson is Park Professor of Classics at the University at Buffalo, Past President of the Archeological Institute of America and Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries. His research has focused on the Roman countryside, The Roman Countryside (2003); Roman social and economic history, Community and Society in Roman Italy (1992); and the history of classical archeology, In Pursuit of Ancient Pasts: A History of Classical Archaeology in the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries (2006).

Judith Evans Grubbs is the Betty Gage Holland Chair in Roman History at Emory University in Atlanta. She is the author of Law and Family in Late Antiquity: the Emperor Constantine's Legislation on Marriage (1995) and Women and the Law in the Roman Empire: A Sourcebook on Marriage, Divorce, and Widowhood (2002). Her current project is a book, Children without Fathers in Roman Imperial Law: Paternity, Legitimacy, and Freedom.

Jane F. Gardner is Emeritus Professor of Ancient History in the School of Humanities at the University of Reading. Her publications include three monographs on Roman legal and social history, Women in Roman Law and Society (1986); Being a Roman Citizen (1993); and Family and Familia in Roman Law and Life (1998); and, with Thomas Wiedemann, a sourcebook, The Roman Household (1991).

Mark Golden teaches Classics at the University of Winnipeg. He has written a book, Children and Childhood in Classical Athens (1990), and many articles and reviews on ancient childhood as well as three books on ancient Greek sport.

Sabine R. Huebner is a Marie Curie Fellow of the European Commission at Columbia University and a current member of the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton. Among her publications are a monograph on the clergy in the later Roman empire, Der Klerus in der Gesellschaft des spätantiken Kleinasien (2005); a co-edited volume on Growing up Fatherless in Antiquity (2009); and a just-completed second monograph on intergenerational solidarity in the ancient eastern Mediterranean. In addition, she is one of the four general editors of Blackwell's new 13-volume Encyclopedia of Ancient History.

Janet Huskinson is a Visiting Research Fellow at the Open University and a Leverhulme Emeritus Research Fellow, following her retirement in 2008 as Reader in Classical Studies at the Open University. She has published on Roman private art, especially of the third and fourth centuries, with a strong focus on the imagery of sarcophagi and funerary monuments.

Christopher Johanson is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Classics at the University of California, Los Angeles. His research applies the tools and techniques of digital humanities and the analytical methodologies of classics to social historical problems. He is currently developing a hybrid, geo-temporal publication, tentatively titled Spectacle in the Forum: Visualizing the Roman Aristocratic Funeral of the Middle Republic, which is a study of material and literary contexts set within a digital laboratory. In his role as Associate Director of the UCLA Experiential Technologies Center, he has worked for or collaborated on cultural mapping projects set in Bolivia, Peru, Albania, Iceland, Spain, Italy and Turkey.

Christian Laes is Assistant Professor in the Department of History at the University of Antwerp and in the Latin Section at the Free University of Brussels. His main research interest is the human life course in the Roman period and Late Antiquity, especially childhood and youth. He has published widely on these and related subjects. Both his books on childhood and youth in Roman antiquity are forthcoming from Cambridge University Press, as translations and expansions of the Dutch monographs, Kinderen bij de Romeinen. Zes eeuwen dagelijks leven (2006) and, with J. Strubbe, Jeugd in het Romeinse rijk. Jonge jaren, wilde haren? (2008).

Hugh Lindsay is Senior Lecturer in Classics in the School of Humanities and Social Science at the University of Newcastle. He is the author of Suetonius, Caligula (1993); Suetonius, Tiberius (1995); and co-editor and contributor to Strabo's Cultural Geography (2005). He has written articles on aspects of Strabo, Suetonius and Roman social history, and has a forthcoming book entitled Adoption in the Roman World (2009).

Janett E. Morgan is Lecturer in Greek Archeology at Royal Holloway, University of London. She has written on household religion in Classical Greece for the journal Kernos and on gender and Classical houses for La maison, lieu de sociabilité, dans des communautés urbaines européennes de l'Antiquité à nos jours and The Blackwell Companion to Greek Religion. Her first monograph, The Classical Greek House, is being published in 2010.

Teresa Morgan is Fellow and Tutor in Ancient History at Oriel College, Oxford. She is the author of Literate Education in the Hellenistic and Roman Worlds (1998) and Popular Morality in the Early Roman Empire (2007).

Henrik Mouritsen is Professor of Roman History at King's College London. He has published Elections, Magistrates and Municipal Elite. Studies in Pompeian Epigraphy (1988); Italian Unification. A Study in Ancient and Modern Historiography (1998); Plebs and Politics in the Late Roman Republic (2001); and a monograph on Roman freedmen is currently in press.

Lisa Nevett is Associate Professor of Greek Archeology in the Department of Classical Studies and the Department of the History of Art at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. Her publications include House and Society in the Ancient Greek World (1999); co-edited with Bradley Ault, Ancient Greek Houses and Households (2005); and Domestic Space in Classical Antiquity (2010).

Daniel Ogden is Professor of Ancient History at the University of Exeter and an Academic Associate of the University of South Africa (UNISA). His principal research areas are ancient traditional narratives, Greek religion, and Macedonian and Hellenistic dynasties. His publications include Alexander the Great: Myth, Genesis and Sexuality (forthcoming); Magic, Witchcraft and Ghosts in the Greek and Roman Worlds (2nd edition, 2009); Aristomenes of Messene (2004); Polygamy, Prostitutes and Death. The Hellenistic Dynasties (1999); and Greek Bastardy (1996). He has also edited the Blackwell Companion to Greek Religion (2007).

Carolyn Osiek was Charles Fischer Catholic Professor of New Testament at Brite Divinity School at Texas Christian University, Fort Worth, now retired. She is co-author of The Family in Early Christianity: Households and House Churches (1997); and co-editor of Early Christian Families in Context: An Interdisciplinary Dialogue (2003), both with David L. Balch; and co-author of A Woman's Place: House Churches in Earliest Christianity, with Margaret Y. MacDonald (2006).

Tim Parkin is Professor of Ancient History at the University of Manchester. His publications include Demography and Roman Society (1992); Old Age in the Roman World: A Cultural and Social History (2003); and, with Arthur Pomeroy, Roman Social History: A Sourcebook (2007).

Sara Saba is a postdoctoral Humboldt Fellow at the Kommission für alte Geschichte und Epigraphik of Munich. Her main research interests are Greek epigraphy and historical geography. She is currently working on a project on isopoliteia in Hellenistic times.

Richard Saller is Professor of Classics and History and Dean of Humanities and Sciences at Stanford University. His research has focused on Roman social and economic history, including the topics of patronage, the family and economic production. His books include Patriarchy, Property and Death in the Roman Family (1994); and The Cambridge Economic History of Greco-Roman Antiquity (2007), co-edited with Walter Scheidel and Ian Morris.

Walter Scheidel is Dickason Professor in the Humanities at Stanford University. His research focuses on ancient social and economic history, premodern historical demography, and comparative and transdisciplinary approaches to the past.

Monika Trümper is Associate Professor of Classical Archeology at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She has written two books (1998; 2008) and a number of articles on monuments in Delos (domestic architecture, urban development, club-houses of associations, shops, the synagogue and the Agora of the Italians), as well as a book on Greco-Roman slave markets (2010) and several articles on Greek bathing culture, which will also be the topic of her next book.

Janet H. Tulloch is a scholar of religious studies and ancient visual culture. She is editor and contributor to the forthcoming The Cultural History of Women: Volume I – Antiquity: 500BCE–1000CE. Recent academic articles include a chapter in A Woman's Place: House Churches in Earliest Christianity (2006); and a theoretical investigation of religious seeing and visual space in Richard Wagner's "The Ring Cycle" in Theatre Research in Canada/Recherches Théâtrales du Canada (2006). She currently teaches at Carleton University in Ottawa.

Jérôme Wilgoux is Maître de Conférences in Greek History at Nantes University. He has edited and contributed to Penser et représenter le corps dans l'Antiquité, co-edited with Francis Prost (2006); Parenté et société dans le monde grec de l'Antiquité à l'âge moderne, co-edited with Alain Bresson and Stavros Perentidis (2006); and Langages et métaphores du corps dans le monde antique, co-edited with Véronique Dasen (2008).

Acknowledgments

This volume owes most to the team of contributors who took up their commitment with enthusiasm and energy and carried it through in good time. They shared the goal of keeping the time gap between invitation, writing and publication as short as possible, so as to present our ideas and material still fresh and new. They responded positively and with goodwill to editorial queries, suggestions and (sometimes) pressure. They overcame the difficulties of busy professional lives and varied personal lives. In our “family” of contributors babies were born, children changed schools, couples moved house, aged parents needed care. A variety of time zones, as well as a shared world of scholarship, reminded us that we were an international community.

Thanks are due to those contributors who used visual illustrations, for their expertise in finding quality images, for presenting them in optimal format, and for their energy and persistence in dealing with museums. To the museums who made their works available to us we offer our thanks: their art and artefacts have become an indispensable part of our understanding of ancient cultures.

The publisher’s editors, Haze Humbert and Galen Smith, provided invaluable support and encouragement throughout the whole process.

There are many who have contributed to the field of family studies in recent decades and we are grateful for their work and inspiration. Some of them are represented in this volume, but others, who were unable to contribute to this project, have nevertheless shared ideas and materials with me over a long period. I would like to acknowledge particularly Keith Bradley, Mireille Corbier, Michele George, Susan Treggiari and Andrew Wallace-Hadrill, who have contributed generously in conferences and correspondence over the years. John Crook and Paul Weaver also contributed over a long period, but, alas, did not survive to see publication of this volume. Werner Eck has contributed in various ways, most recently in advice on the sculpture used on the jacket of this volume.

The anonymous referees who recommended publication of this volume provided valuable advice and suggestions for improving the original proposal.

I make belated acknowledgment of Fiona Crowe, who organized thirteen international colleagues (many represented in this volume) to contribute to a handsome presentation volume in 1999, which became the book edited by Suzanne Dixon (2001) and which advanced important aspects of family studies.

In the last phase of preparing material for the publisher, Gina Coulthard's editorial experience and expertise were invaluable. I warmly thank her for her talent and energy.

Christina Spittel provided an English translation for chapter 3 from Jens-Arne Dickmann's German text.

Sincere thanks are due to friends and colleagues Graeme Clarke and Stephen Foster for frequent encouragement and advice and some reading of text. Graeme also played a vital role in sponsoring the three Roman Family conferences held at the Australian National University, as Director of the Humanities Research Centre here.

I thank Edyth Binkowski for taking on the indexing.

The School of Humanities at the Australian National University has provided much appreciated hospitality and support.
